Captain Ruffner Has Ordered Rations and Forage in Advance—From Here to Hopkins.

The Ninth Field Artillery Battalion of the regular army, which is making a hike on foot from Fort Riley, Kan., to Fort Des Moines, Ia., has accepted the invitation of the Chamber of Commerce to camp here en route to its destination and will be quartered on the Seminary grounds belonging to College, in the west part of the city on June 4, according to information given out this morning by L. M. Eek, president of the Chamber of Commerce.

Twelve officers and two hundred men will get into Maryville about 1 o'clock in the afternoon, Captain David L. Ruffner, field artillery instructor for Battery C, said this morning that if the outfit is planning on making a two days' trip from St. Joseph to Maryville, the battalion will arrive at 11 o'clock in the morning on June 4, if the army unit is going to make a three days' hike. Captain Ruffner said that the artillery battalion makes about six miles in two hours while making the hike it is now on. The seminary grounds is an ideal camping place, Captain Ruffner commented this morning.

Accompanying the unit are 250 horses and mules. It will take a certain amount of fresh groceries, to be purchased in Maryville while the army unit is stopping here for the rations, and for the forage for the horses and mules it will require 2,361 pounds of sacked oats and 2,916 pounds of baled hay and three-quarters cord stove wood. Captain Ruffner has made all arrangements in advance for purchasing these supplies.

Mayor W. O. Garrett is arranging to have a fire hose extension run out from a fire plug to the seminary grounds for the convenience of the Ninth Field Artillery Battalion. The Chamber of Commerce will send out cigars to the men of the outfit and the Battery C of 128th Field Artillery, is planning on furnishing ice cream for the men of the visiting unit.

The officers from the National Guard units at Albany and Burlington Junction have also been invited to be at the dinner.

Major Wm. M. Shepherd is the commanding officer of the Ninth Field Artillery Battalion. In his letter to the Chamber of Commerce he said that he would be glad to have his outfit stop over at Maryville. Captain Ruffner is acquainted with all the officers of the visiting battalion.

The battalion will leave Maryville early on the morning of June 5, en route for Hopkins. Captain Ruffner said today he had received a communication from Mayor Kirk of Hopkins stating that all arrangements for caring for the battalion at Hopkins have been made.

Word was received at the Battery C headquarters that the Ninth Field Artillery Battalion has a baseball team among its personnel and desires a game with any organization baseball team while in Maryville. Serg. Sam England of Battery C said this morning that the Battery C team would undoubtedly accept the challenge of the Ninth Field Artillery team

NEW REICHSTAG CLOSES IN TURMOIL

PARTICIPATED BY COMMUNIST AT FIRST SESSION.

ATTEMPT NEW CABINET

Socialist Delegation Adopts Resolution Which Condemns Nationalist Attitude Toward Reparation Plan.

Berlin, May 27.—The first session of the new Reichstag closed this afternoon amid turmoil precipitated by communists.

The communist members, holding blue goggles in their hands, advanced upon the seat occupied by General Erich Ludendorff, shouting, "Bloodhound; murderer."

The goggles alluded to the disguise adopted by Ludendorff when he fled into Sweden after the collapse of the German army in 1918.

While the Reichstag was in session, President Ebert was attempting to get a new cabinet under way. The Socialist delegation adopted a resolution condemning the Nationalist attitude toward the Dawes reparation plan. The Socialists-Democrats announced they would bitterly oppose any cabinet which does not accept the plan.

Berlin, May 27.—The German government has resigned.

President Ebert accepted the resignation of the ministry and requested Chancellor Marx to carry on current affairs.

President Ebert will confer with the parliamentary leaders today regarding the selection of a chancellor and the formation of a new government.

Prior to the resignation of the cabinet, attempts to construct a straight bourgeois on obstructionist tactics carried on by the German nationals, who, after a four hours' party caucus drafted an evasive resolution in which they reiterated their readiness to co-operate with the other middle parties, but only on the condition that they be given representation commensurate with their numerical strength and that the selection of the new cabinet take precedence over the question of formulating a program of internal and foreign policies.

Orcutt Car Is Found in St. Joseph Today

Evidently Had Been Abandoned—Thieves Tried to Rob General Merchandise Store at Bedison

The car stolen from F. E. Orcutt late Saturday night was found in St. Joseph this morning by the police. The car had been abandoned. Deputy Sheriffs Atherton and Purcell went to St. Joseph at once after the car and were expected to return late this afternoon.

The party or parties who stole the Orcutt car tried to rob the general merchandise store of Fred Dodd at Bedison early Sunday morning. Eugene Hilsabeck who sleeps in the store heard a racket and saw a light from a flashlight and fired a shot at the intruders. The party or parties hastily retreated, leaving behind them a crow bar, a sledge hammer, a coal pick a brace and bit and a few other articles. Mr. Orcutt identified the brace and bit as belonging to him which was taken Saturday night.

Itis not known whether the party was hit or not but it was thought by Mr. Hilsabeck and a few others that perhaps the party had been hit.

At the time Hilsabeck fired, the party had succeeded in getting the front door of the store partly open. The shot from the revolver broke the glass in the front door. It was about 2:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

Senator Borah let it be known he would not even attend the Cleveland convention unless Congress passed farm aid legislation before adjournment.

HARVE ENGLAND

THE ROOT OF THE TROUBLE

When Gov. Gifford Pinchot says that "Teapot Dome is a symptom," and "a symptom is an indication of disease," he shows a far better understanding of recent revelations in Washington than spokesmen for the administration have done. For the whole trouble did not begin or end with Fall or Denby or Daugherty.

Before the National Institute of Social Sciences, Secretary Hughes attempted to put the best face on things when he said: "Contrary to popular notions, the trouble is not with the probity of officials. * * * It is remarkable that the standards of official integrity are so well maintained.' The same defense was offered by President Coolidge April 22 at the Associated Press luncheon: "In some of it a few public officers were guilty participants. But the wonder is not that this was so much or so many, rather that it has been so little and so few." This was only one way of minimizing the significance of the Senate investigations and the foul mess of corruption, graft and crookedness there uncovered. It was less candid than Senator Pepper's remark in Portland, Me., that "only three out of 10" Cabinet officers had proved "corrupt or incompetent."

Criminals in office, when detected, are dealt with through the courts. Whether or not criminal acts are fastened on Fall or others is a question of the administration of the laws. But low standards of official morality, breeding widespread corruption running to the heart of the Government, is a far subtler evil. It is not to be cured by making scapegoats of a "few guilty participants," or palliating their offenses as rare exceptions.

Something more than excuses is needed to tone up the Government, to keep it clean and decent and deserving of public confidence. The administration has not yet told anywhere near the truth. It talks as though the enforcement of the penal code were enough; as is an indictment or two would answer all purposes. It conveniently overlooks the swarm of disreputable and shady characters that made the Government departments and bureaus the center of their sinister operations. They felt at home in the official company in which they moved. The whole atmosphere was contaminated.

So long as the administration cannot bring itself to speak plainly about conditions as they were tolerated for three years in Washington, it will be distrusted. It has reluctantly recognized such symptoms as were common knowledge. It has not had the courage to uncover the real root of the disease. Not by such evasion and timidity will the Government be made wholesome, sound or even respectable.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

A STREET TANGLE

Boston plans to undertake a vigorous recasting of its street names. John H. L. Noyes, chairman of the street commissioners, has found that there is a multiplicity of duplications of names confusing even to residents and irrating to strangers who come into the historic city.

For instances, there are six Washington streets in Boston, five Washington places and a Washington Street North. Six streets are named after the illustrious Adams family, while four "blind alleys" go after the name of "Adams place." There are six West streets, five Auburn streets, five Austin streets, five Elm strees and five High and Park streets, none of which have any direct connection with the others.

A situation such as this causes no end of confusion and results in unfavorable comment by strangers. It is evident that the street commissioners are taking a wise step when they seek to remedy the situation. Every city should have its streets named and numbered so that strangers can find their way around.

THE VILLAGE SMITHY

Lovers of Longfellow's "Village Blacksmith" have been shocked to hear that the ancient building around which the great poet is credited with having secured inspiration for his poem will be razed to make way for a widening of the thoroughfare past which traffic daily is increasing. Both building and forge are in St. Mary Crey, a Kentish village, in England.

The "spreading chestnut tree" was chopped down years ago. It obstructed neighbors' views of the road and caused dark shadows to fall upon their houses. The sun couldn't get in. And today modern dictates would obliterate the last reminder of that age when when the poem was written, an age when even such a thing as a humble blacksmith's forge was reverenced. It seems regrettable that everything associated with the shop could not have been preserved to posterity.

Sixty of the "old grads" of Princeton university have issued a plea against the presence of intoxicating liquor at the university's annual banquet and re-union next month. The merits of the Eighteenth amendment are not involved, the grads point out, but respects for the law is. The stand is commendable. If college students—supposed to be the leaders in thought—are not respectful of law, certainly others cannot be expected to be.

Delegate Describes Convention in 1860 That Named Lincoln

Seward Near Nomination on First Ballot But Favorite Sons United Against Him

With two national political conventions approaching, McClure's Magazine for June recalls what was in many respects the most important convention in history—the Republican Convention of 1860. The story of that convention, which selected Abraham Lincoln as the party standard bearer, is told by a delegate who cast his vote for the rail splitter—Addison G. Proctor of Kansas.

To the 466 delegates who met in Chicago, Proctor says, Lincoln was one of several "native son" candidates and was conceded but slight chance of nomination.

William H. Seward, senator from New York and a former governor of that state was the outstanding candidate. He had pledged to him within 60 votes of a majority.

Vermont asked the nomination of Senator Jacob Collimer, New Jersey presented Senator William L. Dayton, Pennsylvania offered Senator Simon Cameron, Ohio had Salmon P. Chase, Missouri, Judge Edward Bates and Illinois had a united delegation for Abraham Lincoln.

"There were 466 votes and 234 were required for nomination," Procter relates. "The first ballot showed Lincoln receiving about 80 votes, and Seward 183, within 50 of nomination. On the second ballot the votes of the favorite sons drifted toward Lincoln, giving him a hundred more.

"At the third ballot the favorite son voters drifted still more toward Lincoln. As we kept tally we discovered Lincoln was within 3 and a half votes of nomination. As the chairman was about to announce the result, Judge Carter of Cleveland, a pock-marked fellow with a voice like a bull, rose and shouted: "Ohio will change three or four votes from Chase to Lincoln.' That nominated Lincoln."

Horace Greeley had been opposed to Lincoln. One of the Kansas delegates asked the editor his opinion of Lincoln and this was his reply, according to Procter:

"Lincoln is a very adroit politician. He has an interesting history that would make good campaign literature. But the trouble with Lincoln is this: he has had no experience in national affairs, and facing a crisis as we are now, I doubt if such a nomination would be acceptable. It is too risky an undertaking."

The True Story of Woodrow Wilson

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

CHAPTER XXXI

Woodrow Wilson's Relation With The Press.

For one who was able by the printed word to reach into the hearts of men and women everywhere and raise aloft the banner of liberalism, nothing seems so surprising as the relations between Woodrow Wilson and the press. From the beginning of his public career until the end, they constituted a series of misunderstandings and unfortunate clashes. Mr. Wilson's quarrel with the press was not personal—it was impersonal. He disagreed with the methods of American journalism. He was contemptuous of that type of newspaper for instance which is given over to levity and what he considered triviality, and withholds from its readers the substance of the day's news, national and international. To him the London Times was the greatest newspaper in the world because it printed more actual news about the happenings the world over than did any other newspaper.

The growing tendency in recent years in America to anticipate news and to discuss future events or the processes by which conclusions are reached were deeply resented by Mr. Wilson. His theory was that nothing was news until it was completed—that a discussion was of secondary importance, and that only conclusions or decisions were of interest to the public.

To some extent Mr. Wilson's early antipathies toward the press were justified. He made a trip to New England once when he was president of Princeton, and in the course of a public speech said he cared far more for the opinion of people who gathered around the country store and spat tobacco juice into the stove than he did for some of the opinions expressed in the cloistered clubs of the big cities. Much to his surprise some newspaper headlines reported next day that Woodrow Wilson advocated the chewing of tobacco. On another occasion when he was President-elect some of the metropolitan newspapers assigned reporters to his headquarters who were so unfamiliar with national affairs that Mr. Wilson was plainly irritated. When he was asked one day concerning his talks with callers he mentioned that he had had a conference with Senator Reed. One of the newspapermen asked him what State Mr. Reed was from, and also if he was a United States Senator. Other instances of clumsy handling of news in which Mr. Wilson was concerned gave him no little cause for annoyance.

During the 1912 campaign Governor Wilson was as pleasant and sociable a companion in the newspaper car as any candidate had ever been. He exchanged confidences freely, jested good naturedly, and was, in all respects what the politicians call a "good fellow." As President-elect, he began to show signs of intolerance which was intensified when he reached the White House. Responsibility and the seriousness of the problems with which Woodrow Wilson was struggling made him less and less communicative with the press. He rarely read the newspapers which were bitterest in their attacks upon him. The newspapermen in Washington were disposed to be kindly and showed every desire to give him fair treatment. For many months he received them in semi-weekly conferences, answering questions liberally but not always comprehensively. He showed now and then an indignation over the character of the interrogations and upon occasions fenced with his callers very much as a witness who was being cross examined. Many newspapermen lost faith in the candor of Mr. Wilson. They felt that he made use of the official denial too often and that back of his negatives was an equivocal statement. For instance one day, early in his administration, a newspaper printed a dispatch from Washington stating that Attorney General McReynolds had made a proposal to a Senate Committee with reference to legislation affecting the tobacco trust. Mr. Wilson was asked about it and said he knew nothing about any proposal. Silence followed the answer and finally one of the newspaper men inquired if he knew that the Attorney General had been in communication with the Senate committee, and Mr. Wilson replied:

"Oh, yes, he made some suggestions."

In Mr. Wilson's mind a suggestion and a proposal were altogether different. Yet to the newspaper men it was a simple case of splitting hairs. Mr. Wilson did not long continue his conference with the correspondents, in fact, it was inevitable that they should come to an end when the war broke out because the questions relating to the war were of such delicate nature that impromptu answers were not to Mr. Wilson's advantage nor to the public generally, because neutrality, and later war, offered so much opportunity for misunderstanding that only carefully worded statements prepared in advance were used to convey the government viewpoint.

Contrary to the general impression, Mr. Wilson did not have any favorites among the newspaper men when he was in the White House. He did not believe in that kind of relationship. President Roosevelt had a favorite group and frequently inspired certain stories in order to test out public opinion. Mr. Wilson was argued to adopt such a policy but he would not do so. In all of his eight years he probably gave less time to conference with individual newspapermen than they did any President preceding him, and certainly much less than has any President since his administration. Mr. Wilson had no special channel through which he cared to convey information about his position and rather resented the fact that some of his callers, especially members of the Senate and House discussed with the press matters which had been taken up in conference with him.

On one or two occasions Mr. Wilson was so much disturbed by newspaper attacks made upon him that he wrote to the newspapers and asked that certain reporters be removed from the White House assignment. In no case did the newspapers comply with the request.

Mr. Wilson was the type of President who rarely saw newspapermen individually but when he did he usually asked them to retain in confidence all that he had said. Frequently the same information was obtainable from other sources. The author found it to his advantage not to ask for audiences with the President, but to get information about Mr. Wilson's activities from members of the Cabinet and other sources in Washington. This often irritated Mr. Wilson because he disliked to see his plans and intentions revealed prematurely, yet it was in consonance with the newspaper practice of the day.

An interesting conversation with Mr. Wilson in Paris illustrates to some extent the attitude of the President on publicity at the peace conference. One of the first steps taken after the American newspaper corps arived was a decision on the part of the allied statesmen to bar the newspapermen from attendance at the peace conference. It was reported that Mr. Wilson had voted in favor of the secrecy. When the author spoke to Mr. Wilson about it and asked him if it were true, he replied that it was not, and that he did not favor secrecy, but when urged to make a statement to the public he said he believed the American people knew his position well enough. As to the suggestion that people back home would not understand how "open covenants openly arrived at" was discarded and that his action would be felt politically, he replied somewhat impatiently:

"I don't give a damn about the politics of it—if this thing is a success we will get the benefit of it, and if it isn't, we will be attacked anyhow."

Had Mr. Wilson known more about the processes of news-making he would have probably developed a more favorable opinion on this side of the Atlantic during the time that he was at the peace conference. The American newspapermen were to a large extent at a disadvantage in Paris. The representatives of the press from other countries were kept closely informed and even were permitted to read the documents of the peace delegations. It looked for a time as if the French press was being given verbatim copies of everything that occurred. Mr. Wilson innocently kept to the letter of the understanding between the allies with respect to secrecy and not only did the American press fail to report Mr. Wilson's valiant fights for a better peace but all Europe was given an interpretation colored by the British, French, and Italian viewpoints.

The author's relations with Woodrow Wilson have themselves been the basis of so much editorial comment and misrepresentation from time to time that the true story is set forth herein.

Having been assigned by the Associated Press to cover Governor Wilson's headquarters at Sea Girt, N. J., in the summer of 1912, I had a frank talk with Mr. Wilson at the very outset stating that while we had known each other intimately at Princeton, my function as a reporter for the Associated Press would be disinterested and that the organization I represented was, of course, not interested in advocating the candidacy of any man but simply in chronicling the news. Mr. Wilson was at that time prejudiced against the Associated Press because of a belief that it had not given him the benefit of his victory in the Texas primaries until two days after the balloting when the truth was the votes were slow in being counted and, as was its custom, the Associated Press did not make guesses but waited for the final returns.

When I told Mr Wilson that my purpose was to give him a "square deal" he said he wanted nothing else. In all the years that the author covered for the Associated Press the daily news relating to Mr. Wilson's public career during the 1912 campaign and subsequently at the White House, he never made a complaint. I accompanied him on practically all of his trips but saw no more of him than did the other correspondents. When he was inaugurated, I realized that anything like personal relations with Mr. Wilson while I was engaged in the task of writing impartial reports might be misunderstood. Although there were frequent charges that Mr. Wilson inspired my articles especially when I left the Associated Press in 1915 to become a special correspondent, the truth is I saw him alone much less than did some other men in the newspaper business and I never received from him in private conversation any stories which could be used in the newspapers at the time.

Nevertheless, the author obtained from other sources several items of news of a sensational character and published them ahead of competitors and found no difficulty in reflecting the President's views without even seeing him. Any newspaper correspondent who has been Washington through several administrations realizes the futility of depending on the President of the United States himself for news, getting it instead from the many men who see him from day to day including members of the Cabinet, Congress and callers generally.

Although Mr. Wilson occasionally sent me personal messages or regard and imposed in me sufficient confidence on two occasions to ask that I undertake delicate missions which related to our negotiations with foreign governments, I was never in any sense his "mouthpiece" or his "spokesman" in the press. Some editorial writers fell into the habit of designing me as such during the war because of the belief on their part that accurate reflection of the views of the White House was due to inspiration by the Executive himself. The latter status would have involved no journalistic enterprise and would have meant writing in a vein pleasing only to Mr. Wilson.

My own writings, on the other hand, were frequently distasteful to the President. Indeed, the Washington correspondent who allows friendships or antagonisms to influence his dispatches betrays the trust imposed in him by his newspaper and its readers. The general public expects fair mind ed interpretation of the facts without regard to whether an individual or party is helped or hurt by the disclosure.

Mr. Wilson resented particularly an article written by the author just before the President sailed for Europe, pointing out that he was at the climax of his career and that serious disaffection existed inside the Democratic party which, if not cured, might lead to defeat in 1920. Reports of the President's displeasure were carried to me but when I talked with him in Paris and later in Rome, he was cordial. On the western trip in September 1919, I found him personally friendly. I had become so interested in the details of the Shantung controversy that I spent a whole day making a digest of the pro and con of it together with some views on the subject which I had acquired by independent study and was gratified to find that he thought enough of the memorandum to incorporate the argument almost verbatim in some of his last speeches on the Pacific coast.

It was after Mr. Wilson returned to the White House, and had begun to recover sufficiently from his illness to take an interest in public affairs that my own break with him occurred. The dismissal of Secretary Lansing on the ground that he had called Cabinet meetings without authority seemed to me unjust and I reported the facts as well as I knew them, suggesting that only a fit of temper could have prompted this action.

From that time on, Mr. Wilson was represented to me as again displeased with my writings and though I had no communication with him thereafter I was so sympathetic with his ideals that editorial writers continued to accuse me of being inspired by him.

It was not until a few weeks before Mr. Wilson died that I heard that he had spoken of me in complimentary terms. An old Princeton graduate had been chatting with him about his former pupils and Mr. Wilson was kind enough to include me in the list of those whom he held in esteem.

(Tomorrow's chapter tells of the last four years.).

"By Divine Right" at Electric Theater

Elliott Dexter is a marvelous actor! He has poise, dignity, charm of manner and talent that makes him supremely natural. In his first personal production, "By Divine Right," at the Electric Theatre, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week he seems to be more wonderful than ever. He has a lovely leading woman in the person of Mildred Harris, and the support includes such fine actors as Anders Randolf, Grace Carlisle, Sydney Bracey, DeWitt C. Jennings, Jeanne Carpenter, etc.

The picture is out of the ordinary. It has power above the average and beauty that is not only the beauty of scenic background or of personality. It is the beauty of theme.

The modern characters involved in a network of love and hate, passion and sacrifice, all culminate in the most beautiful climax imaginable. Meanwhile there is a great fire scene and a train wreck that is guaranteed to thrill the most blase playgoer.

R. William Neill made the production with skill and understanding. He is to be congratulated.

Livestock Producers are Now Protected

Judges of K. C. Federal Court Upholds the Ruling of Secretary Henry C. Wallace

Farmers and growers of livestock in this district will undoubtedly be glad to hear that the secretary of agriculture, Henry C. Wallace, has issued an order giving livestock men the right to market their own livestock. The orders of the Secretary are enforced by a heavy fine and penalty and there has been some opposition by commission companies. They appealed to the Federal court in Kansas City for an injunction.

The decision rendered by three federal judges upholds the Secretary of Agriculture in his order to the fifty-six livestock commission firms on the Kansas City market:

1. To desist from refusing to buy cattle from the Producers Commission Association.

2. To desist from combining or agreeing among themselves to refrain from buying or refusing to buy cattle from the Producers Commission Association.

3. To desist from causing stock yards traders by any device whatever, to refrain from buying or refusing to buy cattle from the Producers Commission Association.

4. To permit the Producers Commission Association to use the Live Stock Exchange Clearing House for collecting for live stock sold.

One of the outstanding achievements in co-operative marketing has been the handling of live stock. There has been established in fourteen markets co-operative live stock commission companies owned and controlled by the farmer, which have become the biggest live stock marketing agencies in the United States. These organizations are known as Producers Commission agencies and are located in the markets at Buffalo, Chicago, Cleveland, Evansville, Fort Worth, Indianapolis, Kansas City, National Stock Yards, (St. Louis market), Oklahoma City, Peoria, Pittsburgh, Sioux City, Sioux Falls and St. Paul. These fourteen companies are now handling live stock valued at between thirteen and fourteen million dollars a month. Last year they earned ready for refund to their member-shippers in the country more than $400,000,00.

HARMONY CHURCH NOTES.

The morning service was well attended both in Sunday School and at the preaching hour, also. A feature of the congregation was the number of former friends who were present as visitors. Some of them were: Mrs. C. R. Green and daughter, Charlotte and son, Richard, Mrs. Pearl Headrick and Mrs. Grace Pierpoint. Miss Naomi Singery ead the C. E. in the evening, and the preaching service took the nature of a memorial service commemorating the leath of those who gave their lives in lefense of their country. In addition o the sermon by the pastor, an address, "The New South," was given by Fay Woodson Null.

Rehearsals have begun for our Children's Day service, which will be given the second Sunday in June. Remember the date.

There are now nine members in the Teacher Training class. The class is just beginning the study of the second book of the course entitled "The Teacher."

Choir rehearsal Friday evening. Our singers will by invitation, sing at the Decoration Day service at Myrtle Tree church next Friday.

Miss Hazel Cox will have general charge of the church music during the summer months.

Misses Hazel Cox and Charlotte Green sang a duet at the morning service, and Mrs. Pearl Headrick also sang a special number.

Personals.

J. F. Flanary had what might have been a very serious accident on the state road near the pumping station last Saturday evening. A car without lights drove directly in front of his Buick from a cross road. The Ford was pretty well demolished and Mr. Flanary's car was damaged somewhat. Mrs. Flanary sustained a severe bruise on the arm. It is thought the men in the blind car had been drinking and this emphasizes the fact that gas and booze do not make a good mixture.

Leslie Murray and family drove down to Topeka, Kan., Thursday to visit a brother of Mr. Murray. They returned home Sunday. Les says Missouri looks good to him after seeing Kansas. They report a very pleasant visit and good roads.

Mrs. Lemira McKee of Pueblo, Colo., is visiting this week at the home of R. V. McKee. She will make an extended visit with friends in Nodaway County before returning to Colorado.

J. S. Casteel and Fay Woodson Null were fishing the last of the week, near Osborne's ford, near McFall over in Gentry County. They report just medium success. They fished up and down the river near "Nigger Heel."

Mrs. C. R. Green, daughter, Charlotte and son, Richard, came from Kansas City Saturday to visit here for a few days. Rev. Green is in attendance on the General Conference at Tiffin, O. Rev. Green is an acknowledged leader in his church. Mrs. Green and family will return to their home near Maxwell, Ia., next Wednesday and Miss Charlotte will enroll at Ames for summer work next Saturday.

J. S. Casteel and wife were visiting at the home of G. H. Null last Sunday.

John Green and family were at the home of B. S. Cox last Sunday.

Alva Hunt and wife and Rev. Underwood and family were guests at the home of Mrs. Helen Moore last Sunday.

Uncle Alfred and wife visited Mrs. Hunt's sister, Mrs. Lewis Porter, and husband at Parnell last Sunday.

I. E. Miller was trading in Maryville last Monday morning.

Mrs. Grace Pierpoint of Wichita was visiting Mrs. Patterson last week.

Ray Wells and wife were attending commencement at Blockton Saturday. Mr. Wells was at one time, one of the most prominent business men of that town.

G. H. Null bought a fine bunch of pure bred Herefords from Howard Ridge over in Worth County one day last week. He shipped them home via the Chicago Great Western from Athelstan to Ravenwood.

LOWER PRICES FOR LIVE STOCK; SHEEP DECLINE

Kansas City Stock Yards, May 26—Liberal receipts of cattle and hogs were reported at all markets, and while sheep arrivals at no point were excessive that division of the market has been showing acute weakness for some time and a big decline was reported today. Cattle were steady to 15 cents lower and the lowest for some time past. Hogs were down 10 to 15 cents, and 25 cents lower than the recent high point a week ago.

Today's Receipts

Receipts today were 18,000 cattle, 13,000 hogs, and 10,000 sheep, compared with 16,000 cattle, 12,000 hogs, and 6,000 sheep a week ago, and 13,000 cattle, 20,400 hogs, and 3,400 sheep a year ago.

Beef Cattle

Today's cattle receipts included more than the usual per cent of stockers and feeders, and while the available supply of beef grades was not excessive, declines at other markets forced a moderate decline here. Most classes of fat steers were steady to 15 cents off, a few down 25 cents. Quality and finish of the offerings was not as good as in former week. Few choice fat steers were available, and nothing prime was offered. The best steers here sold at $10 to $10.50. The bulk brought $8.75 to $10.25. Cows and heifers were down 10 to 15 cents, but in fairly active demand at the decline. Veal calves were steady to 25 cents lower.

Stockers and Feeders

More than 100 car loads of Southwest stock cattle were on through billing to country points. A fairly liberal supply of stockers and feeders was on the open market and prices ruled 10 to 15 cents lower. However there was a fairly good demand and the offerings were sold out closely.

Hogs

Hog prices broke 10 to 15 cents from last week's close and were 25 cents lower than Monday the recent high point. Chicago's heavy receipts, 60,000, or 15,000 more than the combined supply at the other four Western markets, was the depressing influence. The top price today was $7.50 and bulk of sales $7 to $7.25. Light weights sold at $6.60 to $7.15, packing sows $6.60 and $6.85, and stock hogs and pigs $5.25 to $6.

Sheep and Lambs

Sheep and lambs were down 25 to 50 cents to a new low point for the season. Spring lambs sold at $14.50 to $15.60, clipped lambs $13.25 to $13.75, shorn Texas wethers $7.25 to $7.50, and shorn ewes $6 to $6.50. A good clearance was reported at the decline.

Horses and Mules

Receipts of horses and mules remained small, and trade was much the same as for some time past.

Farm Work Is Much Delayed

Cold Weather and Rains Have Retarded Crops Throughout the United States

(Columbia Missourian)

The outstanding feature of the agricultural situation throughout the United States is the general backwardness of the season, according to an estimate made by E. A. Logan of Agricultural Economics, based on reports of May 15. Cool weather and rains in most areas have retarded farm work and caused slow germination and growth of crops. In many sections much replanting has been necessary and acreages of a number of crops will probably be smaller than previously intended while a few may show larger acreage than expected. In most states the farm work and development of crops is from one to four weeks late.

The preparation of the land for corn and the planting of the crop are late in most areas due to the continued cold weather and rains, although where the plant is up the stand is usually good. Indications are for a larger acreage, as much land intended for other crops will be planted in corn.

Although winter wheat and rye have been making slow growth, in most places the stand is good and the plant well rooted, ready to develop if the weather conditions become favorable. Fall-sown oats in the southern states suffered much from the severe winter and will make a poor crop. Much of the acreage will be cut for hay or grazed off.

Spring seeding of wheat and oats has been delayed and in some sections the seed had failed to germinate.

The prospects for fruits are fair with the exception of peaches, which have suffered from freezing in many areas. The apple crop will not be as large as last year.

Meadows and pastures are backward but are showing improvement. While there has been some suffering from lack of feeds, little disease has been reported among farm animals. Losses of spring pigs have been heavy.

Cotton has been backward but now stands a good chance to make a crop. Tobacco plants are doing well. Sugar cane is improving, but will be only a fair crop in most sections. Sugar beets have suffered in the western states from killing frosts. The planting of early potatoes is practically completed in the producing sections, and in the southern areas are being harvested.

Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Gannan of Maysville came Sunday to attend the summer term of the State Teachers College. They will make their home with Mrs. Gannan's mother, Mrs. Laura Hickman.

MRS. BUSH TELLS OTHER WOMEN

How Pains in Side and Dragging Down Feelings Were Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Massena, N.Y.—"I had terrible pains in both my sides and a dragging-down feeling that affected me so that I could hardly walk, and I got run-down. A friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advised me to try it and I have taken it with the best results. I do my housework and also some outdoor work on the farm. The Vegetable Compound has given me back my health and I can not praise it enough. I am perfectly willing that you should use these facts if my letter will help other women who still suffer."—Mrs. DELBERT BUSH, R. F. D. 1, Massena, N.Y.

The spirit of helpfulness shown in the letters we are constantly publishing is worthy of notice.

These women know by experience what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will do. Your troubles are the same as theirs. Isn't it reasonable to expect the same results?

If you have pains and a dragging-down feeling and are nervous and irritable, profit by Mrs. Bush's experience and give the Compound a trial.

HART FOUND GUILTY; LIFE SENTENCE

WAS CONVICTED ON CHARGE OF FIRST DEGREE MURDER.

JURY OUT OVER 5 HOURS

Slayer of John Less, St. Joseph Motorcycle Patrolman, Was Captured Near Elmo.

(St. Joseph Gazette)

Charles Hart was found guilty of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment for the murder of John Less, motorcycle patrolman, the morning of Oct. 19. The jury brought in the verdict at exactly 9:29 o'clock Monday night. Three ballots were taken to determine Hart's guilt and one to determine whether it should be the death sentence or life imprisonment, M. H. Gillette, foreman of the jury said. The jury was out five hours and 24 minutes, retiring at 4:05 o'clock.

Hart remained in his chair at the counsel table while the verdict was being read by Judge Thomas B. Allen, before whom the case was tried. His expression did not change. Mrs. John Less and her small daughter were not in the courtroom, having gone home. Her son, Thomas, 15 years old, remained.

John Heffley, defense counsel, announced that a motion for new trial would be filed within the next four days, the limit allowed by law. Whether or not Judge Allen will grant the motion, is problematical.

That Hart expected the verdict was indicated not only by his actions but by an expression made to a Gazette reporter during the trial Saturday.

"I expect a conviction," Hart said. "I don't believe that they will give me the death sentence, but I expect I'll get life or at the best second degree murder or manslaughter. I've been framed by the police department in this case. I wonder if the jury realizes that it is as much a part of a policeman's job to convict a man as it is to arrest him. You can bet your last dollar that it wasn't me that shot Less, though."

Held in County Jail.

Judge Allen had scarcely finished reading the sentence before deputy sheriffs had the prisoner in irons and on his way to the county jail, where he will be held until the next shipment of prisoners destined for the Missouri state penitentiary at Jefferson City.

Several of his friends were in the courtroom and as they left they were heard making vows of vengeance against members of the police department, who were witnesses in the case.

Hart was charged with murder in the first degree. The state asked the death penalty. He is alleged to have shot and fatally wounded John Less, also known as John Lesnoski, motorcycle policeman, in front of the Western Union telegraph office, Third and Felix streets, about 12:30 o'clock the morning of Oct. 19, while attempting to escape after being arrested for investigation in connection with recent holdups. Less was shot with a .45 caliber revolver, the bullet entering the right grain, causing peritonitis, which resulted in his death two days later at St. Joseph's hospital. Hart was captured while hiding at a farmhouse near Elmo, Mo., in Nodaway County, the day following Less' death.

The court instructed the jury that before they could convict defendant of any crime, they should believe and find from the evidence that Hart shot and killed Less. The state's evidence was to the effect that Less was killed by a .45 caliber automatic pistol, as the bullet taken from Less' body was a steel jacket .45 caliber. Also that when Hart was captured in Nodaway County he had a .38 caliber revolving pistol. Also that a police officer had taken a .45 caliber automatic pistol from France in the hotel and the officer had that pistol in his possession at the time of the chase after Hart. The officer swore he did not use or shoot the automatic gun, that he shot his regular .38 caliber pistol in trying to capture Hart.

Japanese Statesmen Confer on Alien Bill

May Resort to Propaganda Against Exclusion Provision—Quotas are Greatly Decreased

Tokio, May 27.—Members of the cabinet and a number of other statesmen conferred informally today upon Japanese exclusion by the United States.

Japan's next step has not been outlined, but there are indications that influential Japanese—men who are well known outside of this country—will attempt a propaganda program to combat the "materialism" which is held responsible for the exclusion of the Orientals.

LEGUMES NEEDED FOR SOIL FERTILITY

SAYS R. A. KINNAIRD AT C. OF C. DINNER.

TO GIVE DEMONSTRATION

Truck From College of Agriculture to Be Here in August—Eek Tells of C. of C. Work.

The purpose of the "clover and prosperity" campaign was explained last night by R. A. Kinnaird, county farm agent, at the Chamber of Commerce dinner at the Bainum Hotel.

Mr. Kinnaird pointed out the necessity for clover and other legumes in keeping up the fertility of the soil and this fertility will mean prosperity to the agricultural sections, he said.

A two-ton truck, sent out by the College of Agriculture of the University of Missouri, loaded with the "clover and prosperity" exhibits will be in Nodaway County August 5 and 6, Mr. Kinnaird said, and will give demonstrations at Maryville and Elmo. It may be that the truck will be here on August 4, also, in which case it will be at Conception. The truck will be filled with exhibits which will show the benefits of clover and other legumes to the soil. A picnic will be held while this truck is in the county.

L. M. Eek, president of the Maryville Chamber of Commerce, who presided at the dinner last night, appealed to those present to "sell" the Chamber of Commerce idea to all those still outside the fold. Every merchant in Maryville should be a member, he said, because the organization means much to him and his business. Much of the work accomplished by the local Chamber of Commerce cannot be seen, Mr. Eek said, because it is leading in the campaign for good will among all citizens of the county, and promoting the spirit of co-operation as well. He then called attention to the school and farm show which will be held this fall and said it was intended to have one of the biggest events in the history of the county.

E. E. Harper, consulting engineer, who was in charge of improving the water plant here about five years ago, was present at the dinner last night and made a short talk. He said that he had visited a number of towns in North Missouri but he thought that Maryville had the best organization of business men he had yet seen, and complimented the local Chamber of Commerce on its work.

Mr. Harper has received a commission from Governor Hyde as a member of the Missouri board of boiler rules, for the term ending January 21, 1928, in the place of Peter F. Bush, whose term has expired. This is in addition to Mr. Harper's regular work as consulting engineer for state eleemosynary institutions, in which capacity he has been acting for the last year.

William Gaugh played two mandocello solos at the dinner last night. He was accompanied on the piano by his sister, Lucile.

Chamber of Commerce Trip Is Called Off

Unfavorable Weather Conditions Cause Change of Plans—St. Joseph Delegation by Rail

The Chamber of Commerce trip to Tarkio today was called off this morning on account of the unfavorable weather conditions. However, several carloads of Maryville people made the trip to attend the celebration of the opening of the baseball season at Tarkio.

This season's first sociability tour under the auspices of the Automobile Club, the Chamber of Commerce and allied organizations will be made by rail to Tarkio, Mo., the destination, instead of by motor through Maryville as was planned.

The change was made Monday morning, after a consultation with W. S. Belden, United States weather observer here, who predicted heavy rains. Since the St. Joseph delegations have in past years been caught in such weather and forced to negotiate muddy and slippery roads, it was decided best to make the trip by rail.

About 100 St. Joseph firms will be represented on the tour, according to S. A. Moore, manager of the Automobile club, who has charge of the arrangements. These firms have all been notified of the change in plans and have expressed their willingness to go by rail, which will cost a little more than by motor. Those who make the trip will leave St. Joseph at 7:20 o'clock this morning, taking the Burlington train at the Francis street station. Several cars have been chartered for the occasion. They will leave Tarkio about 3 o'clock in the afternoon, returning here at 6 o'clock. Brown's Municipal band of fifteen pieces and the Woodmen of the World drill team will be taken along.

When the delegation reaches Tarkio it will be met by a welcoming committee and taken to the Christian church, where a fried chicken dinner will be served. A parade will then be formed and will proceed to the ball park, where the Tarkio team will play a team from Omaha. Following the ball game the drill team will give an exhibition drill. The Maryville delegation will go to Tarkio direct.—St. Joseph Gazette.

Mrs. Emma DeMoss and daughter, Elizabeth, returned Saturday evening from Guilford where they spent a few days with the former's sister, Mrs. Carl Wray, and her aunt, Mrs. Jane Todd.

Will Corken and Phillip Growney of Conception Junction visited in Maryville yesterday.

They will be accompanied by Mr. DeArmond's mother, Mrs. S. J. DeArmond, who will visit old friends here and relatives in St. Louis.

Mrs. W. C. Chaves of Atheison, Kan., left this afternoon for her home after a short visit with her son, William F. Chaves, and family. Mrs. Chaves was en route home from a visit with relatives at Omaha.

Pig Surveys Furnish Valuable Information

Farmers are Asked to Fill Out Cards Furnished by Rural Mail Carriers in County

The pig surveys made semi-annually the past two years through the cooperation of the Post Office Department with the Department of Agriculture have been of such inestimable value to intelligent farmers in planning future production and in marketing current supplies that it is desired to make another survey as of June 1, 1924. To the earnest efforts of the postmasters and rural carriers much of the credit is due for the accuracy of the reports and high precentage of returns secured, the accuracy of the results being borne out by a check upon subsequent receipts at various markets.

The Post Office Department is very anxious to lend its support again in making this new survey, which is of so much benefit to rural people. In addition to questions on swine production, a few inquiries have been included relating to dairy animals on farms and one to work stock. Dairying has apparently been increasing quite rapidly so that an accurate check on the growth of the industry has not been possible. It is well, then, that a survey be made at this time to ascertain actual conditions existing in the dairy industry that farmers may be guided in their future activities and guarded against over-production with its consequent disturbances.

Finally found health in Kellogg's Bran after suffering long with constipation

Mr. Patch writes that Kellogg's Bran "solved his problem." It has solved the problem of constipation—mild and chronic—for thousands of others. It has brought relief when all else has failed because Kellogg's Bran is ALL bran. Nothing but ALL bran can be 100 per cent effective. Read Mr. Patch's letter:

Dear Sirs:
I have been a constant sufferer from constipation and have wondered what was the cause of it. I have tried about all the cereals I could think of, and finally tried Kellogg's Bran. This solved my problem. I feel 100 per cent better and I owe it to your Bran. . . . Thanking you very kindly for this great cereal, I am
Very respectfully,
Chester C. Patch,
761 Main St., Greenwood, Mass.

For the permanent relief of constipation, eat Kellogg's Bran regularly—two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. It sweeps, cleans and purifies the intestines. It rids them of the dangerous poisons that lead to other diseases. It is guaranteed to bring results, or your grocer will return your money.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is delicious with milk or cream. You will like its nut-like flavor—so different from ordinary, tasteless brans. Sprinkle it over the cereals. Cook it with hot cereals. Eat it in Kellogg's Bran muffins, griddle cakes and many other wonderful recipes given on the package.

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, is made in Battle Creek and is served by the leading hotels and clubs everywhere. It is sold by all grocers.

"Where Your Patronage Is Appreciated"

About knowing your store --

It is not as easy to judge furniture, or furniture values, these days as it was even a few years ago. There is too much "trick" so-called furniture made for "sale" purposes.

But you have one unchanging thing to guide you in your buying, the integrity of reputable merchants.

We know the value of goods, of coverings, of labor. We know, and pass on to you, our knowledge of values. We do not urge you to buy when in our store, but we do ask that you, in justice to yourself as well as to us, to consider and compare quality WITH price, when you shop around.

Also, we ask you to remember the Price policy—you are not allowed to take any chances of not being fully satisfied with what you buy here. If furniture selected does not look as well in your home as you thought it would, when you saw it in the store, you can return it and make new selection. That's one of the things—one of the policies—that has made our success possible.
